TALK OF BLOCKADE

HOLLAND'S NEXT MOVE IN VENE-ZUELA IS A QUESTION.

CASTRO STANDS BY

Curacao's Commercial Intercourse With Venezuela Absolutely Neses sary to her Existence.

Washington, Oct. 28,-Diplomats together with state department officials are wondering just what is to be Holland's next step in her dealings with Venezuela now that President Castro has declined to revoke his decree of May 14, prohibiting the transshipment of goods for Venezuela ports at Curacao. Holland's latest note demanding the revocation of that decree generally has been understood to be an ultimatum by Holland and Nov. 1, was set down as the limit of time in which she expected Venezuela to take favorable action on her demand. That time is near at hand. Holland has maintained that the restoration of Curacao's commercial intercourse with Venezuela is absolutely necessary to her existence. There has been talk of a blockade of the ports of Venezuela. If Holland is determined to do this she is fully prepared for the work. Several months ago when the relations between the two countries became acute as a result of a number of irritating circumstances, Holland, which usually keeps a man-of-war near Curação, began augmenting her naval representation, then, in consequence of which she has now three good sized war vessels in West Indian waters. Capt. Snethlage in compand of the fiest is said to be a man of rare executive ability and discretion. With a blockade of Venezuelan ports the Holland government believes that she can force Castro to terms.

BOWERY LANDMARK TO GO.

Destruction of Steve Brodle's Saloon Has Been Decreed.

New York.-"Ladies and gents, to the left you see one of the most historical scenes of this great city. That, ladies and gents, is Steve Brodie's famous saloon. You have all heard of Steve Brodie, the first man that ever made that terrible leap for life from the Brooklyn bridge to the river below and lived to tell the story."

That was the message that the leather lunged announcer sent through a megaphone the other day to a party of tourists from Salamanca, N. Y .;

Landmark of the Bowery Soon to Be Razed.

Piqua, O. and Bird-in-Hand, Pa., as their sight-seeing motor car rapidly passed 114 Bowery and they twisted their necks to obtain a view of the red-framed structure that for more than a quarter of a century has been one of the leading attractions of the celebrated thoroughfare where "they do such things and say such things."

Soon the wielder of the megaphone will be forced to revise his announcements, for the saloon which Steve Brodle controlled until a few months before his death, four years ago, is to pe razed and on its site probably will be erected a prosaic store which will have over it no giamour except that which comes from resting where once stood what all the Bowery knew for years as "Brodle's hangout."

Men who were intimate friends of Brodle declare that he had piled up a fortune of more than $100,000 out of the little saloon, and that all of it had come from an original investment of $200 in connection with his "leap" from the Brooklyn bridge. That sum. according to this informant, was paid to the tug boat captain who participated in the "rescue" of Brodie from the waters of the East river, and who thereafter discreetly confirmed every detail of the story which the "bridge jumper" told to the admiring hundreds who crowded his saloon to hear the thrilling story from his lips; to see his marvelous gallery of prize fighters' portraits, and incidentally to swell his bank account by purchasing his liquors. detail of the story which the "bridge his liquors.

Although there was ample proof that Brodie had never jumped off the ridge, he stoutly maintained until his dying day that his story was true.
